Bloomsbury’s Whistleblower Policy enables employees, other categories of workers and third parties to have any concerns relating to the Group confidentially addressed. For information about Bloomsbury’s Whistleblower Policy, please see below under the heading Reporting a concern.

Bloomsbury is committed to complying with employment and other legislation applicable to the locations in which it employs people, ensuring the human rights of individuals are protected. Bloomsbury has a diverse workforce and follows a policy that no employee or other person receives more or less favourable treatment on the grounds of gender identity, sexual orientation, colour, race or ethnic origin, nationality, religion, disability or age.

Managing risk and due diligence processes in relation to slavery and human trafficking

Bloomsbury senior management are in close contact with the management teams and key staff from our international offices and regularly visit local Bloomsbury offices. This helps senior management ensure there is no slavery and human trafficking in its own business.

Bloomsbury's greatest risk of exposure to slavery and human trafficking is through its supply chain. Some of the suppliers Bloomsbury works with are located in areas assessed as having a higher prevalence of modern slavery and human trafficking, including China and India.

In order to ensure our suppliers operate to the highest standards, Bloomsbury selects high-quality suppliers with good reputations within the industry, and will not knowingly engage with a business involved in slavery or human trafficking.

Bloomsbury incorporates anti-slavery and human trafficking clauses in contracts with key suppliers including printers and pre-press third parties worldwide. Senior Bloomsbury employees also visit key printers and pre-press suppliers worldwide on a regular basis to inspect working conditions at first hand. Should concerns arise, Bloomsbury would seek to resolve them in the first instance; failure to reach a resolution could result in the termination of our business dealings with the relevant organisation.

Bloomsbury's key suppliers also publish annual statements on slavery and human trafficking, and have policies and codes of ethics in place which they require third parties to adhere to.

Detailed due diligence is also carried out before engaging in joint ventures or acquisitions.

Bloomsbury is an active member of the Book Chain Project (the "BCP"), which is a collaborative project run by Carnstone involving over 500 print suppliers and 400 paper manufacturers. The BCP's tools help publishers make informed buying decisions for book production. In addition to the BCP's forest sourcing and chemicals and materials strand, the BCP gathers and analyses data on suppliers through their labour and environment strand. Publishers are then able to collaborate on specific issues that are important to the industry. As a member, Bloomsbury attends relevant sessions organised by the BCP, which are also attended by representatives from across the industry.

In order to mitigate the risk of human rights violations within the forestry sector, Bloomsbury is committed to ensuring that the paper that is used by Bloomsbury is responsibly sourced. A keystone of Bloomsbury's global print purchasing strategy is the requirement for Forestry Stewardship Council (FSC) paper - a stipulation in all print and/or paper orders. Bloomsbury works closely with suppliers to understand the impact of the paper that is used.

Finally, to the degree that it is feasible, Bloomsbury has geo-mapped its Tier 1 and 2 supplier base to obtain as full a picture as possible of its supply chain and appropriately manage risks associated with slavery and human trafficking. Bloomsbury regularly reviews its global supplier base. As part of that process, specific attention is focussed on current and prospective suppliers' verifiable commitment to and current social responsibility policies and practices.

Reporting a concern

Everyone at Bloomsbury has a responsibility to be aware of the risk of modern slavery and human trafficking abuses in our business and supply chain. In most cases, employees are encouraged to discuss concerns with their line managers or Divisional Managing Director. However, where the normal channels may not be appropriate, Bloomsbury's Whistleblower policy enables employees, other categories of workers and third parties to raise any form of wrong doing and/or malpractice relating to the Group confidentially in the knowledge that they will be taken seriously and dealt with in an appropriate and professional manner. The policy is available to view at:
